Website and team support

Draft proposal for Amber Fitzgerald and John
Prepared by Muhammad Zulzidan M | October 29, 2026

DRAFT FOR ZUL'S REVIEW. Provisional fees and allocations only. Confirm team costs, available staff, and Amber's recurring tasks before issuing a final client offer. This document does not start a service or authorize billing.

Purpose

Provide a defined monthly allowance for website support, with an optional designer and assistant to prepare approved content and reduce the routine tasks Amber handles herself. Zul remains the main contact and reviews the work.

Proposed monthly options

Term	Website support	Website, design and admin
Provisional monthly fee	USD $300	USD $700
Total monthly allowance	5 hours	15 hours
Planned allocation	Technical assistance and small updates. Coordination and review count within 5 hours.	5 technical hours, 8 design/admin hours, and 2 coordination/review hours.
Three-month total	USD $900	USD $2,100

Both options include one check-in of up to 30 minutes within the stated allowance. These are total service hours, including meetings, revisions, testing, and reporting. All fees are in USD. Third-party charges and any applicable taxes are separate. Confirm tax treatment and the invoicing business details in the final offer.

Choose work based on the actual need

Before selecting a package, identify two recurring tasks, their frequency, the materials Amber supplies, and the approvals required. Agree estimates and priorities before each task starts. The monthly allowance does not promise a fixed number of designs, newsletters, or uploads.

Scope and responsibilities

Website support

Maintenance and troubleshooting within the available hours, Contentful assistance, small layout or content adjustments, and agreed checks of key website workflows. Investigation, testing, and deployment time count toward the allowance.

Design and assistant work in the combined option

Prepare template-based class flyers, social graphics, or newsletter artwork using approved details. Upload and format approved recipes, prepare newsletter drafts and archive updates, organize inquiry follow-up lists, and draft customer replies for Amber to review.

Example: Amber provides one recipe or announcement and approved photos. The team estimates a newsletter draft, matching promotional graphics, and an archive update. The agreed subset is completed within the available monthly hours.

Amber keeps approval and business decisions

Amber supplies or approves copy, photographs, recipes, event details, and branding. She approves public content and newsletter sends, and retains decisions about service pricing, booking commitments, refunds, and customer relationships. Publishing an archive issue and emailing subscribers are separate actions.

Zul coordinates the team

Zul prioritizes requests with Amber, assigns appropriate staff, checks output, and provides a concise monthly report covering completed tasks, hours used, and next priorities. Confirm the assigned team and access arrangements before the trial begins.

Work outside this proposal

Large new features, major redesigns, substantial e-book creation, custom calendar synchronization, photography or video production, paid advertising, full inbox management, telephone coverage, and emergency or 24-hour support need separate scope and approval. This is part-time shared team support. Third-party subscriptions and payment-processing fees are paid separately.

Existing website obligations

Remaining agreed corrections and the original project closeout remain part of the current project. They are not charged again through this support allowance. Document final booking and payment checks, content review, and launch approval separately.

Trial and working terms

Three-month trial, starting on an agreed date

Month 1: Select two recurring tasks and agree templates, access, approvals, and a baseline for the workload.
Month 2: Complete agreed priorities and review time used and revision effort.
Month 3: Review completed work and Amber's feedback, then decide whether to continue, resize, or stop.

Billing and capacity

Proposed payment is monthly in advance. Unused hours expire at the end of each service month and do not roll over. All work, including coordination, revisions, and calls, counts toward the allowance. Warn Amber before the allowance is exhausted. Extra work requires a separate written estimate and approval; there are no automatic overage charges.

Requests and response times

Use one agreed request list and one client contact. Proposed acknowledgement is within two business days, with delivery dates confirmed per task. This is a response target, not a promise to finish every task within two days. Agree business days, time-zone overlap, and any urgency arrangements before starting.

Review and ending the trial

Proposed term is three months, with an option for either party to stop before the next unpaid month by giving 14 calendar days' written notice before renewal. A paid service month remains available through its end. No automatic commitment beyond the trial; continuation requires written agreement. Confirm these terms in the final offer.

Before a final proposal is issued

Zul checks the full delivery cost, including his own review time, staff capacity, tools, and revision effort. Amber and John confirm the preferred tasks, option, budget, approver, and desired start date. Then issue a final written scope with the confirmed price, payment details, and terms for acceptance.

Current status: Draft only. No acceptance, payment, publishing, or sending action is implied by reviewing this document.
